Background

It is predicted that the plastic pipe production capacity will maintain a growth rate of 3% annually in next two years, and reaching 16 million tons in 2020. Biggest improvement is expected in the production capacity of the municipal drainage pipe. It is anticipated that the average market share of plastic pipe will exceed 55%.

According to some official statistics, China's plastic pipe industry has more than 1500 patents for inventions and utility models. The development of plastic pipe industry in China is an excellent example of technological innovation leading to the development of the industry. Even though the traditional pipeline production growth slowed down a bit, new, functional pipes are advancing rapidly and more than making up for it.

However, those market trends and changes bring questions like: What are the opportunities for the enterprises in this industry provided by the transformation of the pipeline industry? How do new enterprises break industry barriers? Is the future direction clear? It is our goal to bring you answers for those and any other questions that you may have during Ringier's '2018 Plastics & Rubber Processing Technology and Innovative Materials Application Summit'. It will focus on both domestic and international biggest challenges coming from new materials and new applications.
